Sterling Life Science Logistics Joins MassBio to Enhance Biotech Supply Chain and Innovation Ecosystem

[Boston, MA, April 1, 2025] Sterling Life Science Logistics, a division of Sterling Corporation, is proud to announce its new membership with MassBio, the Massachusetts Biotechnology Council. This strategic alliance marks a significant milestone for Sterling as it aligns with over 1,700 other life science companies and service providers to drive forward the biotech industry in Massachusetts and beyond.

Jonathan Vargas, Director of Life Science Logistics at Sterling, emphasized the technical benefits of this partnership: "Joining MassBio not only connects us with the vibrant biotech community but also integrates our advanced logistical solutions with MassBio's extensive network. This synergy enhances our ability to offer just-in-time delivery and state-of-the-art GMP-compliant storage facilities, directly addressing the needs of the fast-paced biotech industry."

Dan Markow, President of Sterling Corporation, highlighted the broader business implications: "Our membership with MassBio is a strategic enhancement to our mission of providing top-tier logistics solutions. This collaboration allows us to tap into a wide array of biotech innovations and expand our services within this crucial industry, ensuring that both MassBio members and Sterling are better positioned for future success."

MassBio is known for its commitment to advancing Massachusetts' world-leading life sciences ecosystem through industry support services and public policy advocacy. The organization offers its members access to critical resources, including the MassBioHub conference and business center, significant savings on lab supplies and business services through the MassBioEdge program, and exclusive networking opportunities with industry leaders.

Sterling's integration into the MassBio network will leverage these resources to enhance service delivery to its clients in the biotech sector, emphasizing improved supply chain efficiency and compliance with industry-specific regulatory standards. The partnership is poised to create significant value for both MassBio's membership base and Sterling's clients by facilitating more streamlined operations and fostering innovation through collaborative projects.
